British Economic Policy
Agricultural Policy

1000 → Indian villages were independent and they pay their own revenue and conditions.

1100 → farmers could not surrender by their farmlands.

1400 → Britishers adopted the same policy initially. Officers collected revenue from farmers but they started to give them some policies. In British government started some new policies.

1700 → In other hand Britishers fighting in all over India for extending the their territories so they need the money which they could only pay in a year.

2000 → In the absence of industry, trade and other means of increasing revenue and Britishers started some new policies which changed the lives of people.
