

2. Wet-collection Devices. Wet washers and scrubbers are devices using mixed phases of gas and liquid. The object of the scrubber or washing device is to transfer suspended particulate matter in the gas to the scrubbing liquid which can be readily removed by the gas cleaning device. This leaves the gas clean to pass onwards to the process for which it is being used, or alternatively to be discharged to the atmosphere.

